Lemon Grove Was Near Top in Number of Chest X-Rays

More Than 1200 Make Unit Visit

Lemon Grove was among the top in communities of San Diego county in number of people who visited the Mass Chest X-Ray Unit during its two day stay here.

On Friday, 644 adults passed through the unit and on Saturday 567 visited the unit, making a total of 1211 who were X-Rayed.

The appearance of the Grossmont High School band and the Lemon Grove Elementary School band assisted greatly in creating interest in the unit and no doubt helped to increase the number of visitors.

The local committee, under the direction of Rev. Morris J. Mulkey, worked hard to make the two-day visit here a success, and they are gratified with the excellent showing Lemon Grove has made.

San Diego is the first city on the west coast to have a Mass Chest X-Ray for the purpose of locating tubercular people. The visit of the units to San Diego enabled the outlying communities to take advantage of the service. But it was at the request of these communities, through committees formed for the purpose, that the units made visits outside the city.

In the event that any person X-Rayed is found to be afflicted with tuberculosis, all members of his immediate family who have been contacted are given further X-Rays to determine the extent of the disease.

This mass X-Ray was for the purpose of locating lung tuberculosis, as it is the only kind that is highly infectious.

The Mass Chest X-Rays conducted in San Diego and neighboring communities was sponsored by the San Diego County Tuberculosis Association, in co-operation with the San Diego County Medical Association. The Associations are very emphatic in stating that this is not socialized medicine.

The San Diego County Tuberculosis Association owns one unit, and for the purpose of this drive other units were brought here so that the job could be completed in a comparatively short time.

It would have taken one unit located in San Diego eight years to complete the task which is being accomplished this month. In that length of time persons who had the disease, would have spread it to innumerable others before it could have been checked, and then it would have been too late.

Only persons over the age of 16 were X-Rayed. The reason for this is there is practically no lung tuberculosis in children, and even should there be, many of them outgrow it before reaching adulthood. The X-Ray machines in these units are built to take adults, hence the handling of children would not have practical.

Benefit for the Organ Fund

Lemon Grove Congregational Church needs a new organ and the choir has decided to do something about it. A series of entertainment has been planned by this enthusiastic group with confidence that the public will support their efforts.

The first planned will be a Valentine box supper and dance at Friendship Hall on Tuesday evening, February 14, at 7 p.m.

The need for the organ gives a fine opportunity for some person, a family or group of persons, interested in the work of the church to establish a memorial for a departed loved one or as a future memorial. Music in church services is such a vital factor in worship that every effort possible should be made to encourage a choir to give of its best.

H. S. Board Seeks Name for School

Additional suggestions for the names of the two new high schools to be built in the Grossmont Union High School district are invited by the Board of Trustees. The board will consider all names suggested and select the official names for the two schools located in Western La Mesa and in El Cajon at a future board meeting.

The following names have been suggested for the High School on the La Mesa site:

Grossmont West High School—the western school in the Grossmont Union High School district.

Helix High School—Name of neighboring hill.

La Mesa High School—location.

Mission Rancho High School—site is part of old Mission Rancho.

Nebo High School—name of neighboring hill.

University High School—name of street on which site is located.

At the present time La Mesa High School seems to be favored.

Names which have been suggest for the high school on the El Cajon-Bostonia site are:

El Cajon High School—location.

El Cajon Valley High School—location.

El Capitan High School—"The Leader," name of neighboring mountain.

Grossmont East High School—the eastern school in G.U.H.S. District.

James Madison High School—name of President and of street on which site is located.

Here the name El Cajon High School seems to be favored.

High schools usually take geographical names or the name of leading statesmen or presidents. In some cases high schools are named as memorials for philanthropists or to perpetutate the memory of some loved one.

Anyone inclined or interested in providing such a living memorial are invited to contact a member of the Board of Trustees.

Deadline for suggestions is February 8 which should be mailed or sent to Grossmont Union High School, Grossmont, giving the suggested name, reason for the suggestion, and the name and address of the individual making the suggestion. Those who do not have any name to suggest may express their preference for one of the names alredy suggested.

San Diego Was a Big County When California Became a State

The year 1950 marks the one hundredth anniversary of California acquiring 27 counties from its one mammouth territory.

Historical records in the office of Secretary of State Frank M. Jordan show the 15th enactment of the newly organized first state legislature was to define the legal boundaries of the counties.

In subdividing the state into counties, the legislature also established 27 seats therein.

Old documents show when the great change from Mexican to American ownership came in 1846, an immediate attempt was made to obtain order out of the chaos. When the first constitutional convention was held at Monterey in 1849 the necessity was seen for the legislature to divide the state into counties.

That became the task of a legislative committee headed by General Valley. Then on January 4, 1850 the committee presented its report to the legislature Several changes were made and on February 18, the act was passed and approved by Governor Peter H. Burnett.

The original act set the boundaries for the counties of San Deigo, Los Angeles, Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo, Monterey, Branciforte (Santa Cruz) San Francisco, Santa Clara, Contra Costa, Marin, Sonoma, Solano, Yola, (Yolo), Napa, Mendocino, Sacramento, El Dorado, Sutter, Yuba, Butte, Colusi, (Colusa), Shasta, Trinity, Calaveras, San Joaquin, Tuolume and Mariposa

Secretary of State Jordan said with two exceptions, the counties derived their names from the Spanish or Indian languages.

One exception was Butte, a word of French origin, applied to the upper Sacramento Valley. This was named after the Buttes, so-called by French-canadian trappers since about 1829.

The other exception was the County of Sutter, named after famed General John A. Sutter.

Legal descriptions of San Diego County as approved by the 1850 legislature: Commencing on the coast of the Pacific, at the mouth of the creek called San Mateo, and running up said creek to its source; thence due north to the northeast boundary of the State; thence following said boundary in a southeasterly direction to the Colorado river; thence down the middle of the channel of said river to the mouth of the Gila river; thence following the boundary line as established by the treaty of the thirtieth of May, one thousand eight hundred and forty-eight, between the United States and Mexico, to the Pacific Ocean, and three English miles therin, thence in a northwesterly direction, running parrallel with the coast, to a point due west of the mouth of said creek, which was the place of beginning. The seat of justice shall be at San Diego.

Levi Selvig presided as chairman of the meeting. Devotions were led by the pastor, Rev. W. LeRoy Elster, after which he gave the pastoral report. Reports were given by chairmen of the various Boards and organizations. With the congregation less than a year old, the reports were extremely encouraging, revealing how the Lord had blessed the work, and the loyalty and sacrifices of the members.

Mr. Selvig was elected president of the congregation. Dr. Donald Johnson is vice-president; Virgil Duea, secretary; Levi Selvig, treasurer.

The Board of Trustees elected is composed of Gus Brandel, Oscar Mueller, Virgil Duea, Ingel Tormondsen, Palmer Svalsted and Hans Hansen.

Open New Tract on Taft Street

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Q. Reynolds moved from National City into their new home at 1606 Taft street last week. Mr. Reynolds was connected with the Naval Air Station and had charge of an auxiliary station at Brown Field until June, 1946.

Mr. Reynolds is a building contractor and has already sold two houses which he will build in his tract.

Will Widen Canton Drive

On promise of the county to widen Canton drive to 50 feet, the property owners along the street are asked to set back fences and hedges to the property line. The roads committee of the Monterey Heights Civic Organization, of which Ferris White is chairman, has been working on the project and succeeded in getting the county road department to do the work.

Canton drive is heavily used by school children going to and from Monterey Heights school, and under present conditions, is a traffic hazard.

Talk on Comic Books at PTA

Kenneth Dean of the San Diego Co-ordinating Council will speak on "Comic Books—Their Influence and Selection," at the next meeting of the Monterey Heights PTA next Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Children of the third grade, under the direction of Mrs. Kennedy and Mrs. Ritchie, will present a program of piano selections, recitations, dancing and group singing.

Mothers of third graders will serve refreshments, with Mrs. Arthur Barry the chairman.

Commission to Present a Bond Issue

The fire protection district election has been postponed to the first Monday in April when the Lemon Grove Fire Commissioners expect to present a bond issue to the voters for their approval.

The Commissioners met with the County Counsel Wednesday and upon the suggestion of the Counsel decided upon the bond issue.

The entire capital outlay will be included in the bond issue, and the cost will be spread over a period of years, while the money for purchase of equipment and construction of the fire station will be made available all at one time.

By bonding the district for 10 years, or more, the cost of construction of the station and purchase of equipment will be borne by new residents moving into the district as well as those here now.

It is thought that the cost of the building and truck will amount to an average of about 8c per $100 assessed valuation over the 10 years, based on an assessed valuation of $4 million.

The Commissioners ask that the individuals and representatives of the various clubs and organizations contact them so that the matter may be thoroughly discussed and understood before the election in April.

Channing Mason, chairman of the Commission, will be pleased to hear from local people concerning the program as now set up. His phone is Homeland 6-5128.

M. J. Sheldon, Chief Engineer of the La Mesa, Lemon Grove and Spring Valley Irrigation District, informed a group in Lemon Grove this week, that Lemon Grove was better situated as far as water supply was concerned, than some of its nieghbors, and that if the Commissioners purchased a 300 to 500 gallon pumper truck, that this community would be well protected against fire. While we do not have as many fire hydrants as we may need as the community continues to grow, Mr. Sheldon stated that they were so advantageously located that the truck would have no trouble in getting ample water for the fighting of fires.

FROM THE NEWS CIRCUIT

JAMES DORAIS

The year 1950 may be only a few short weeks old, but already it's very evident that like 1949 or 1902, it will be replete with conflict, international crisis, crime, political bickering, economic tensions, war and threats of war.

A glance at the front page of any day's newspaper will establish that the inability of men to live amicably with one another will be the running feature story of this last year of the half-century. Formosa, the "battle of the budget," Harry Bridges' trial, the Flying Arrow, Russia latest UN walkout, the coal strike—all are facets of this same story. Discouraging, isn't it, when one considers that the goal of brotherhood was undertaken nearly two thousand years ago?

But there are exceptions to the story. Last year there were some notable ones.

There was the story of Kathy Fiscus, whose tragic fate saddened the hearts of millions of people in countries all over the world, who for days had been united in hope and sympathy. The helicopter rescue of the Hallinan boy, lying helpless in the Yosemite wilds, was another story that had nothing to do with man's inhumanity to man. The search for Ruth Aberle, the sixteen year old Girl Scout lost in a snow-covered Washington forest, was another.

Ruth was found in mid December. It's an old story now, but a letter just received from one of the participants in the search, Mrs. George Baxter of Kelso, suggests that people may have advanced a little farther on the path to brotherhood than the usual daily headlines indicate:

"No matter how sour you might get on human nature, you can believe that the average person is very kind, unselfish and human.

"There were people engaged in the hunt for this girl who never have known and never will know each other. Good Americans and rank radicals, young kids and old men, well educated people, who hate mud and cold discomfort, but all behaving in one pattern. Soldiers from Fort Lewis—loggers, mill workers—shop keepers, who had closed their places of business to join the search. And everyone kind and thoughtful toward everyone else.

"I saw men crying that first night in the woods because in that snow and wind, it seemed so improbable the child could survive. It's sort of awful to see a man stumbling along with a lantern in the dark, clothes muddy and soaked and tears running down his cheeks. This world isn't lost yet."

Like 1949, the new year doubtless will have its share of heart-warming tales of sacrifice, goodwill and faith. Over the long haul, who is to say they are not more significant than the crime news, political battles, or the rumbling of guns in faraway places?

Political Parade

CLEM WHITAKER, Jr.

If ever a man had a driving ambition to climb California's political ladder to its highest rung, that man was Lt. Governor Goodwin J. Knight.

The friendly "Goodie," as he has come to be known, is liked by nearly all with whom he comes in contact—and has very real capacity for public service.

Yet, while deep in the hurdy-gurdy whirl of politics, Lt. Governor Knight has sacrificed his desire to become Governor of California—and in so doing undoubtedly has greatly increased in political stature in the eyes of many of his fellow Californians.

For in his own words, Knight stepped down for the following reasons:

I have withdrawn "out of a profound conviction that no man's personal ambitions or individual political interests should cause him to disregard greater obligations and responsibilities.

"There are considerations higher than those of winning or losing an election and I have come to a determination of my course wholly on the basis of what I believe to be right.

"I would not risk by any action of mine a destruction of . . . the forces of good government, of progress, decency in public office, of true liberalism and of good citizenship. These I have sought always to serve, and shall continue to serve."

All of his friends recognize Knight's decision was one of the hardest any man with political ambition could be called on to make.

That the decision was made however, will do more for the political party in which Knight believes than almost any of the heavy campaigning which is certain to precede the June Primary Election.

If Knight had chosen to wage an all-out battle with Gov. Earl Warren for the Republican nomination for Governor—and that certainly was his right, if he so chose—then many GOP observers believe that the successful candidate would have had less strength against the eventual Democratic nominee at the November General Election.

With Warren running as the Republican nominee for Governor and Knight campaigning for re-election as Lt. Governor, few political analysts would say that both won't stand a better chance of success—by far. That would seem to hold true whether or not Warren and Knight run as a team—and whether or not they agree on each and every issue, which they most assuredly don't from the statements of the two men over the years.

By this action, however, it is exceedingly doubtful that Knight has in any way undermined his political carreer even if he should never have the chance to serve as Governor. But there is still a likely prospect that Goodwin J. Knight may eventually mount the top rung of the State's political ladder.

SPECIAL TURKEY RAISERS MEETING

The turkey situation and outlook for 1950 will be discussed by leaders of the industry at a county-wide turkey meeting to be held at 8 p.m., Wednesday, January 25, at the Ramona High School library, according to R. H. Adolph, farm advisor.

Since the turkey egg production season is at hand, the discussion of the present turkey situation and outlook will be of interest to all San Diego County turkey producers.

Films and slides of special interest to turkey men will also be shown at this meeting.

o o

SULFA DRUGS CANNOT DO EVERTHING

Sulfa drugs can't substitute for good management in turkey raising, Farm Advisor, R. H. Adolph of the University of California Agricultural Extension Service warned growers. Fewer broods and better care go a long way toward making turkeys a profitable enterprise.

Turkey poults should be purchased from "Pullorum Clean" stock and hatcheries. They should be fed and given water as soon as possible. If trouble occurs, diagnosis is all important. Losses can be all out of proportion just because of neglect, Adolph says.

Eliminating other possible sources of infection such as chickens, cats, dogs, snakes and other animals may be the ounce of prevention that is worth a pound of cure. Rodent control, poults from disease-free sources and clean houses also mean healthier birds, according to Adolph.

HOW TO FEED BABY CHICKS

The first two or three weeks of a chicken's life are critical ones, reminds R. H. Adolph, Farm Advisor, University of California Extension Service. Chicks are off to a good start if they get a complete mash as soon after hatching as possible.

Feed chicks, being raised for meat production, to give the most rapid and efficient gains. Give them food containing high levels of energy-rich grains such as corn and milo, protein feeds of high quality, and plenty of vitamins. Keep their alfalfa meal and milling by-products below 4% and 14%, respectively. Replacement chicks, however, do not need such costly feeds.

Adolph says the practice of feeding cracked grains for the first two or three days to prevent "pasting-up" may give the chicks a slow start. Try it only when all other preventative measures have failed, since the cracked grains do not give the chicks enough nourishment.

Many poultrymen wonder how finely to grind their mash. Adolph says he cannot give a final answer, but from the evidence now available, the fineness of the grind does not seem to be important for rapid growth and high level egg production. There are some exceptions, however. High levels of wheat in finely ground feeds often cause gumming of feed in the mouth. On the other hand, finely ground oats are the most nutrious form for chicks.

Some poultrymen have shown interest lately in the pelleted and granulated feeds for chicks. These "chick-size" pellets may help reduce wastage, but they are also higher priced. Pellet-fed chicks have more time for cannibalism. In some cases the pellets have been crushed to make a granular feed. Adolph says he still does not know whether this practice will be profitable to the poultryman because these feeds usually cost at least ten cents more per 100 pounds than the ordinary mashes.

County Assessor Starts His Work

For the first time this year, all field deputies assisting the public will wear a name identification badge. This will give assurance to taxpayers that the person calling upon them is a representative of the Assessor's office, and also permits the taxpayer to know the name of the deputy assessor. Field deputies also carry an identification card with their picture, which will be shown to taxpayers upon request.

On Monday, 70 trained field deputies started covering the entire County to assist taxpayers in making their declarations and claims for exemption. A trained corps of counter deputies are taking declarations in the office. All types of statements and claims for exemption will be taken in the office and in the field by the deputies, except those statements in which merchandise is involved. These will not be taken until after March 6, at 12 noon.

Welfare exemptions must be filed not later than April 1. The Assessor is prevented from taking welfare exemption claims after that date. All other types of statements must be filed before May 29 at 5 p.m. Penalties may apply on declarations made after that time, and the Assessor may not legally take church, veteran, college, or orphanage claims after that date.

Veterans buying real estate under contract must have the contract recorded with the County Recorder before March 6 at 12 noon. If the contract is not recorded by that time, the Assessor must deny the veteran his exemption on that property. Veterans buying property under GI and FHA terms, through banks or other companies, will not be affected, because their deeds are always recorded. If a veteran is not sure, he should bring his deed to the Assessor's office at once for checking, as their is still time for the veteran to comply with this new mandate of the law. This deed then becomes a permanent record, but the veteran must still file annually for veteran's exemption.

A law passed last year now permits the spouse to sign and claim the veteran's exemption.

Real Roses in the Cheeks—You Call That a Handicap?

By BILLY ROSE

When Eleanor and I first moved up to Mt. Kisco, some of our neighbors dropped by to pay their respects, but I didn't encourage these visits. The landed gentry of Westchester are nice enough folk, but they don't talk my lingo. Besides, I see no point in cultivating people who think it's smart to chase a fox.

But a little down the road from us live a couple I cultivate as often as they'll have me. Their names are Fred and Jane Newell. I met them through Eleanor two years ago, and I'll never forget the first night we had dinner at their house.

Jane answered the doorbell. She was pretty all over, and I liked her right away. "Excuse the peasant skirt," she said. "I have a baby penciled in for the fall."

Fred was in the living room listening to the radio. He had the tweedy look of the good guy in the women's magazine stories. We talked for a couple of minutes before I realized he was blind. He told me he was a writer, and answered my unspoken question by explaining he dictated his stuff to his wife.

Billy Rose

It was a fine dinner and a fine evening. Jane carried her child as if baby-having were some kind of party. Around eleven o'clock, Fred said to Jane, "Maybe the Roses would like ice cream."

"Maybe they would," said Jane, "but we haven't any. I'll drive down to the village and get some."

"I'll go with you," I said, "just to make sure you don't forget chocolate."

ON THE WAY to the ice-cream parlor I said, "Tell me something. What makes you kids act as if you had a gold mine in the cellar?"

Jane smiled. "I don't know. I guess we've been pretty lucky."

"Lucky!" I said, and then stopped, embarrassed.

"It's all right," said Jane. "Of course, it would be nicer if Fred could see, but neither of us thinks that's very important."

"How'd it happen?"

"War stuff," said Jane. "Fragments of a land mine on Okinawa. We weren't married then. Fred was moved to a hospital in San Francisco. The first letters he sent me weren't in his own handwriting. He explained that he was dictating to a nurse because he'd been wounded in the right hand.

"At the time, he still had some hope that a special operation might restore his sight. He didn't want to tell me about his eyes until he knew for sure.

"WELL, THE OPERATION was a complete miss-out. When Fred knew he'd never see again, the darn fool wrote me that I was free to marry anybody I liked. Of course, I hopped a plane to San Francisco and got my fella."

"Atta girl," I said. "Now tell me to shut my face if I'm out of line, but doesn't it ever bother you—I mean, making this sacrifice?"

"Sacrifice, my foot," said Jane softly. "Look at it this way. I'm two years away from 30. In 10 years, I'll be two away from 40. When Fred went off to war, I was 23. Real roses in cheeks. Probably the best I ever looked in my life.

"From here in, no matter what happens to me—wrinkles, dry skin, gray hairs, babies—Fred will always see me as the fresh-faced kid he kissed goodbye at Penn station in '42. For the guy I'm crazy about, I'll be 23 the rest of my life. Is that bad?"

"No," I said. "That isn't bad at all."

Red Cross Soon to Start Annual Drive for Members

Announcement was made by Dr. Frank Lowe, Chairman of San Diego Chapter, American Red Cross, of the appointment of J. L. Haugh, President San Diego Transit Lines, as chairman of the 1950 Red Cross Fund Campaign. Mr. Haugh will direct the activities of an army of Red Cross volunteers who on March 1 will set out to solicit funds throughout San Diego City and County. Preliminary organizational plans are now being made and the announcement of other campaign leadership will appear shortly.

This is Mr. Haugh's first experience in serving Red Cross in San Diego, but he is enthusiastic about the program of the Chapter and its Branches in serving military personnel, veterans and their families, and all the community. As President of the Transit Lines he is vitally concerned in Red Cross Disaster Service and its work in the Community Blood Bank, two Red Cross services that are constantly engaged in saving human lives.

While Mr. Haugh has been a resident of this area for less than two years, he already has made himself felt in civic activities. He was recently appointed chairman of the Laguna Tunnel survey committee, which is investigating the feasibility of constructing a tunnel through the mountains to Imperial Valley. He has spent a lifetime in the transportation business, his first job being that of a rodman for the Big Four Railroad of the New York Central Lines.

During World War 1, when the government took over the railroad, he was Regional Director for the Northwestern District.

Talks and Walks With Mother Nature

BY TRIXIE TREGANZA

CLARK'S NUTCRACKER

Clark's Nutcracker, the wariest and most subtle trixter of the Corvidae family, Nucifraga Columbian:

The name is not so very long or hard,
But how the trail that to his country leads?
The bird itself is not so very large,
But how the country where he lives and breeds?

We have answered these questions, to our own satisfaction, each Spring for the last four years; so before going into details of the bird himself, we shall give a brief outline of what it means to hunt and study this bird during its breeding season, as we do not wish any of our readers to have the idea that such trips are of the Pullman Palace car or upholstered nature. On the contrary, they require a great deal of energy, physical endurance, and some little mental calculation and deduction. Many times you hold your own life in your own hand, and a cool head and instant and unerring judgment is all that will save you. We have yet to make a trip in the mountains during this time of year that has not been frought with more or less danger, and always with a hard fight to make headway; therefore the following is a general summing up of what one might expect if he follows the trail that leads to the country where this whimsical bird breeds.

The Clark's crow, or Camp Robber is about as big as a Kingfisher. He is of gray plumage with contrasting black and white wings and tail, and has harsh "char-r" note. The nest is a thick walled cup composed chiefly of fine barkstrips, externally of inter-laced sticks lined with finest shredded bark, placed at moderate heights in a pinyon, juniper or pine. Eggs are usually three with ground color a lichen green, light mottlings or streakings of pale drab gray and minute spottings of olive distributed over the entire surface. He is found in western North America in coniferous timber, casual east of the Rockies. He usually nests late in March, even in February. They are practically independent of climate, but even in spite of a dozen feet of snow, the ooligist is put at ease.

One goes 15 to 30 miles on horseback, with at least 10 miles over crusted snow from six to 10 feet deep; at this stage an experienced sure-footed beast is appreciated. Then a five mile climb as straight up as possible for one to hang on to the crusted snow and make headway; or perhaps a day or so of thaw has changed the hardened surface of the snow to a consistency that will hold your weight about every fifth step, leaving you to wallow through the other four up to your waist.

You have perhaps covered half of the upward climb when an army of fleecy clouds is seen racing toward you. They gradually become darker and blacker. The peaks of the mountains and the sun are hidden from you. Of a sudden a snapping blast strikes you like a whip lash, then another, and another, each in more rapid succession, and before you realize all this commotion, you find yourself in the midst of a mountain blizzard. It is seething, boiling, whirling turmoil of wind and snow. Your face is pitted with slivers of half frozen ice that are hurling themselves in all directions. Half smothered you crouch for breath. There is heard above the shriek of the wind, a mighty groaning, a terrible rending and splitting, a roar and a boom that makes all else seem quiet for the instant. Then you awaken to the realization that mighty king of the pine timber has been wrenched from its birthplace and hurled crashing down the mountain side. With a sickening sensation you know your helplessness to cope with such might and power of the elements. Lashing self and companion together you attempt a very slow retreat down the now hidden trail, knowing too well that this turning back signifies failure and defeat, and you have experienced one of the varied moods of nature that enables you to answer the question "But how the trail that to this country leads."

Suddenly without warning you are brought back to consciousness by J-a-y, and on looking up a Blackheaded Jay is seen flying over to an old dead pine. The binoculars are placed on him more through idle curiosity than anything else. As you glance along the dead grey branch on which he has alighted it is suddenly discovered that another bird is sitting on the end of the same limb. Do your eyes deceive you? You look again. No sure enough, it is a Nutcracker, as absolutely gray and motionless as the limb on which he is sitting. Whether he has been there all the time, or has quietly arrived unobserved, you do not know; for to a glance of the naked eye he appears only as a part of the dead broken branch. Siezed with the one idea that there is a nest in one of the immmediate trees, a search is commenced. You step out into the open and halloo. The echo of your own voice mocks you, as the Nutcracker, apparently struck dead, drops from the limb some 20 or 30 feet, then with the suddenness with which he dropped, he catches himself, soars off far down the hill with his peculiar undulating flight to another tree. And the next day we find a nest with two eggs in it, really a prize and a better knowledge of "But how the country where he lives and breeds."

Work Starts on 1950 Census

District Supervisor Edmond E. La Casse of the United States Bureau of the Census here has returned to his office after attending an administrative training school at Los Angeles Census Area Headquarters in preparation for the 17th decennial census of the United States.

Mr. La Casse states that preliminary work on the 1950 census, to be taken in April, will begin immediately. This includes organization of the district office, conducting publicity, interviewing applicants for jobs and later, training of office clerks, field crew leaders and enumerators. The Assistant Supervisor and the administrative clerk of the local office will also be given special schooling at census area headquarters in Los Angeles at a later date.

The territory included in the census district which Mr. La Casse supervises includes the entire San Diego County area. Enumeration districts are being established for the County, and for sections of the larger communities in the County.

Three brands of field rations that rate Gold Chevrons for overseas service in time of war—from 1898, through 1917-18, and the years of World War II.

In the Veterans of Foreign Wars you find former dogfaces, leathernecks and gobs who can remember times when they would have traded a warehouse of the stuff for one square meal.

That's the quiet thrill an overseas veteran enjoys when he belongs to the Veterans of Foreign Wars—the chance to reminisce and swap stories with fellows who talk his language.

It's this rare type of fellowship that makes it easy for them to work together for the good of their country, their home town and their mutual welfare—as members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Any group of overseas vets may argue loud and long about which outfit won the war—the Army, Navy, Marines, Coast Guard, Air Force, or the Seabees. On one point, however, you will always find them in complete agreement:

By a journalism student

Last Thursday the journalism class of Lemon Grove Junior High, under the direction of Mr. Merriman, visited the Journal newspaper office in San Diego.

First we met Miss Billings who showed us around. She took us to the printing room first, where we saw a large printing press. Next we visited the editorial room where the city editor, sports editor, rewrite, proofreaders, editors of different departments were at work. We were shown the teletype machines used for sports and general news. Then we were shown the make up rooms where the copy is set on linotypes. We also saw the casting room where tons of metal is melted in a big vat then poured into casts. When we were about to leave we were given envelopes with different cuttings and a comic strip. We hope we can have another trip to a newspaper plant and that Mrs. Darroch will be able to accompany us.

YMCA Week to be Observed

Under the general chairmanship of William Brotherton, the Armed Services Y.M.C.A., the San Diego Y.M.C.A. and County Y.M.C.A. will observe jointly Y.M.C.A. Week, January 22-29, as proclaimed by the mayors of the various municipalities in San Diego County. The local Associations are joining with other Y's of the Pacific Southwest Area in common effort to interpret the Y.M.C.A. program to a wider circle of parents and friends. The sponsoring committee includes in addition to the "Y" staff members, Dr. John Carroll, Richard Jessop, Duane Hawkins, Robert Sprague, William Payne, Lou Weise, David A. Neal, and Dr. Walter Stark.

Dr. Lester Bond, President of the San Diego County Ministerial Association in encouraging general participation by the churches, Dr. Carroll is arranging radio programs and Mr. Brotherton is supervising press releases. Members of service clubs will make brief statements to their own clubs concerning the wide outreach of service to young men and boys by the three Associations. The 75 members of the three "Y" boards will assist by speaking in churches and to other community groups.

Since the founding of the County Y.M.C.A. in 1923 hundreds of young men, boys and girls have been enrolled each year in group work in various communities of the County outside the corporate limits of San Diego. Each year scores of youngsters attend Y.M.C.A. Camp Marston at designated periods for the County Y.M.C.A. Financial support is provided by the San Diego Community Chest and other Chests of the County plus the assistance of members enrolled at large.

The Armed Services Y.M.C.A. in San Diego is credited with being the largest operation of its kind in the world, having recently greeted the 61st millionth serviceman at their building.

W. Arthur Thomas represents Lemon Grove on the Executive Board.

In addition to these two programs, all San Diego radio stations will carry special Boy Scout programs in the form of either network hook-ups or transcribed dramatizations being made available by the local Council office.

KGB will carry a special broadcast on the San Diego Area Council's participation in the forthcoming National Scout Jamboree at Valley Forge, Pa., June 30 through July 6. The program is scheduled for Friday, January 20, 8:45 to 9 p.m.

Participants will include Earle B. Moore, Scout Executive, Dr. Lester E. Bond, president of the Council, Henry Parker, chairman of the local Jamboree Committee and Charles Brandon of Coronado.

Most of the newspapers, which come to the Review office as a courtesy exchange, carry a department of events of from 20 to 50 or more years ago as recorded in the newspaper.

The Review can have no such department as it is only a little more than 16 months old. This fact is called to the local readers' attention to stress the fact that the Review is now recording the history of Lemon Grove. Every item printed is a matter of history and preserved in the files of the Review.

Advertisers will also note that their ads will be a part of this history. If there is no ad., there is no record of your business. Ten years or more from now as far as records are concerned business houses which do not advertise were non-existant.

Salvation Army Store an Aid

The Salvation Army store at 3496 Main street, has proven its worth to the community in its short time of service. The store has been a boon to families of low income in that there is always a large supply of clothing and shoes in all sizes for every member of the family.

Monterey Heights Civic News

by M. F. LEAR

The regular monthly meeting of the Monterey Heights Civic Organization was held at the Monterey Heights School on Monday, January 9 at 7:30 p.m. with President Dave Hentigan in the chair. Six new members were admitted.

A discussion was held on by-laws, which were recently rewritten by a committee appointed for purpose of shortening and simplifying the same. They were put to a vote of the membership and ratified.

Ferris White, chairman of the roads committee, reported that there are still a few fences protruding on County property on Canton drive. As stated by your correspondent a month ago, if all residents will move fences, hedges etc. back to their own property lines, the County has promised to widen Canton drive to a width of 50 feet. This will surely make a big difference in the appearance of our community and also greatly increase the safety factor as to the amount of traffic traversing this road. At the present time, two cars in opposite directions barely have room to pass and in the evnt of pedestrian traffic at the same moment one or the other must of necessity practically stop. This is a very dangerous situation especially in the morning, at noon and in the late afternoon when the school children are using this street. Changing this street to a thoroughfare by the County will involve no expense or no increase in taxes to the property owner. Won't you, Mr. Resident, get behind this move and help put it across? You will naturally benefit from it more so than the residents who do not live on Canton drive.

A motion was made by Fred Miller (and carried) that a special meeting of Monterey Height Junior Citizens ranging in age from 12 to 18 years and their parents be held on January 23 at 7:30 p.m. in the Monterey Heights School for the purpose of discussing ways and means of promoting a dance for these boys and girls. It is the organization's desire that this meeting will be well attended by both parents and a goodly representation of tomorrow's citizens.

Mrs. G. Roberts requested us to sponsor the X-Ray Essay contest for the Monterey Heights School children through grades 4, 5 and 6. This, the organization agreed to do, and will award $3.00 first prize, $2.00 second prize and $1.00 third prize. This money was obtained by a collection of the members at the suggestion of Bob Gallandt.

A committee composed of Graton Roberts, Dave Hentigan, Fred Miller, Don Vogler, Ferris White, Harry Monell, Bob Gallandt and Carl Lindy was appointed to assist Chairman Larry Leech on the proposed Park and Recreation program.

It was agreed by the organization to direct the secretary to address a communication to the Grossmont Pageant Committee requesting that the Christmas program be continued on an annual basis.
